

Peter Peterson graduated from Eastern Washington University with a B.S. in Physics and a B.S. in Chemistry. He received his Ph.D. in Environmental Chemistry from the University of Alaska Fairbanks in 2015. Currently, he is a postdoctoral researcher at the University of Michigan. His current research focuses on the remote sensing of atmospheric trace gases in the polar regions with ground-based and airborne instrumentation.