

Bas Rokers is an Associate Professor of Psychology at the University of Wisconsin – Madison, and currently a Visiting Professor at New York University. His work focusses on the neural basis of visual perception, with an emphasis on motion and depth perception. His research relies on multiple techniques and domains including neuroimaging, clinical disorders of the visual system, and virtual and augmented reality.